

WASTEWATER SOURCE CONTROL SYSTEM

Abstract of the Invention

A wastewater source control system for use with a sewer service line conducting a flow of wastewater from a building to a sewer main. A flow control device is installed in the sewer service line with an upstream detention tank to detain building wastewater upstream from its point of discharge into a sewer main during certain heavy stormwater runoff periods.